

Hello FCC,

I own the airwaves. As do you, the person sorting through all of these e-mails. The airwaves are public property, given freely to broadcasters so that they may serve the public interest.

Having free control over such an enormously valuable commodity -- the airwaves -- broadcasters have a moral obligation to uphold their end of the bargain: to serve the public interest in a fair, unbiased way.

Sinclair stations are violating this obligation by running a blatantly partisan pseudo-documentary criticizing John Kerry. This underhand attack, targeted to swing states, should be stopped. I hope the FCC fulfills its obligation to keep honest the wealthy, powerful networks that benefit so much from your generosity. Thank you.
